CONCERNING THINGS GROTESQUE.

I always think there is something genial I always think there is something genial in a man who takes care of his cuphemisms. Of course it is quite right to call a spade a spade, but there are also arguments for describing it as an agricultural implement. We understand Charles Lamb, when at dessert, he proposed the health of the much calumniated King Herod; and when he was told of an atrocious murder he would only describe the spoke of Satan, "and what Satan was, murderer's conduct as eccentric. It is very common to speak of a person or incident as being odd. I think we should get another shade of meaning if we sometimes substituted the term grotesque, a term which has hugely taken my fancy of late while engaged in the contemplation of men and things, which might be used in a double sense; 'smprims, as engrafting.'

"Yes."

Chairman, "It was passed unan-In a double sense; imprimis, as engrafting frony on the motion of oddity, or, secundo, as denoting a thing that is funny as well as odd. Sometimes the two meanings blend. When the first Napoleon said, 'I regular to see something extremely green and then we see something extremely green and the new part of the grotesque. B. little thought that a lot of grinning boys were overhearing his domestic arrangements. But on one occasion his usually pacific temper was greatly disturbed by a rascally tradesman. As he moved along the street, he denounced that rascally tradesman in the emphatic style which the late Mr. Landor used to adopt, and which Dickens h s reproduced in his Boythorn. Some of the tradesman's friends overheard his very incisive and cynical remarks, and the tradesman promptly commenced an action for libel. It was rather hard lines that a man should be persecuted for a solloquy; especially when he was of a kindly nature that would willingly injure no one. But the action had to be arranged on very painful terms. Dog actions have always a touch of the grotesque. ted, so the case goes for or against. Judge and jury are fond of dogs, and as much as possible, let the dog have his own way. I saw a very grotesque thing in our law proceedings the other day. A man was indicated for the manislaughter of his wife. The prisoner was liberated on ball, and the jury were detained for the night. A non-legal mind might have suggested that the jury might have been released, and the prisoner detained. It is very grotesque to see the way in which penny-actions. the prisoner detained. I saw a very ludicrous application to a police magistrate the other day. An old gentleman applied to a magistrate for his advice and assistance, in reference to his son. It appeared that the son would never come down to breakfast till eleven o'clock in the morning. Under these circumstances he wished to take out a summons where the come down to breakfast till eleven o'clock in the morning. Under these circumstances he wished to take out a summons where the control of in the morning. Under these circumstances he wished to take out a summons against him, or something of the sort. The magistrate very properly told the applicant to go about his business. What an inert paterfamilias the man must have been. How the son must have chaffed the governor who could not govern. That vile word, governor, is itself grotesque. It is generally used to denote a roi faise and, applied to a father who spoils has son by a son who does not reverence his ather. The penny-a-liners frequently give us examples of the grotesque, and the middered who said that his crime would be a finithing for the penny papers, certainly made a grotesque remark. Speaking of crimely if lately saw a remarkable letter that v is recently taken into custody on a crim, lat charge. A Faw practical women in San Francisco are qui tly instituting an important business and providing for its carrying on in so thorough and able a manner as to leave no doubt of its success. We refer to the "Woman's Pacific Publishing Company," incorporated a few weeks since in San Francisco. It has for its capital the sum of $25,000—all contributed by women —its officers, Superintendent, and business agents are all women, the type-setters are women, and so, in fact, are all connected with the concern, with a few necessary exceptions. Poison yourself, Samivel, and you'll be glad of it arterwards!

The advertisements give us constant touches of the grotesque. Por instance, there was an advertisement in the Guardian, to the effect that a young clergyman in bad hearth and no money 'wishes to be adopted.' I observed the advertisement of a nose machine, which, applied to the nose for an hour daily, so directs the soft cartilage of which the member consists, that an ill-formed nose is quickly shaped to perfection. Lately, I saw an account of an ingenious poacher, who was brought up for poaching on Lord Sefton's land.

In the House of Commons we often see many grotesque things. This line is generally left for the Irish members, and it must be owned that the Attorney-General for Ireland appears to dedicate himself to the discharge of this function. Lately there was a debate on the appointment of an Irish lord-lientenant. The ford-lieutenant, was himself in the House, and observed that he did not see why 'a gentleman of position, a gentleman of loyalty, a gentleman of position, a gentleman of loyalty, a gentleman of high stand, ing and credit, should not be appointed. All which was certainly true, but to say it of one's self was—grotesque. So have we instances of the grotesque in those mimic discussion forums, the School Board. I saw in South Wales that a lady objected to teaching the Bible because it spoke of Satan, "and what Satan was, was a subject of much interest and discussion to demonologists." The Duty of Business Men.

A weighty responsibility rests upon the business men of the country in the pending Presidential campaign, as upon the issue of it serious results to them are dependent. We mean by business men, all who depend on their own activity of brain and muscle for expending their capital and securing a liyelihood and fortune. Every farmer, mechanic, merchant, sailor, labor-cr,—in short, every one who has either goods or labor to sell, has an immense interest in securing the perpetuation of Republican rule in this country. Commerce, manufactures, agriculture, all need a reliable currency of an amount adequate for te business of the country. The perpetuation of loss to those whose thrift depends upon the handling of it. History shows that A weighty responsibility rests upon the island had given their consent. To inquiries made by Bouviere and Lord Cecil, with reference to the proceedings at Geneva, Mr. Gladstone said that the report that the summary of the British argument on the Alabama claims, had been presented, was incorrect. Great Britain had made application to the arbitrators for adjournment.

pleasure, the efforts of the Administration to maintain the rights of our country by peaceful and rational methods. The Democratic party never has refrained from a war if party capital could be made thereby. When it held power, it made our nation the terror and scourge of the weaker nations on this continent. The Republican party is not tempted to resort to the warlike devices of European dynasties in order to preserve its popularity and power. Hence its present peaceful policy is one which the business men of the land should seek to preserve.

To the business men of the country, then, we appeal for earnest effort on their part to elect Grant and Wilson. The work must not be left to mere politicians.

Madrid telegrams of the 22d, announce a battle between the Government troops and the Carlists. The former were suecessful after an engagement of five hours. The losses were severe on both sides.

Madrid telegrams of the 23d say that a band of insurgents in the province of Nature, under command of the Carlist chief, Carasas, has submitted to the government forces.

Grant to Greeley, retorts upon its critics thus: "There is nothing in Greeley's career to lead the Nation to suppose that, either as a civil service reformer or revenue reformer, he is any better than Grant, he would be redicted assection. his political associates are, on the whole, worse than Grant's; his conceit and self-confidence and restlessness tenfold greater than Grant's; and so also is his guilibili-ty." This, from an anti-Grant Republi-can journal, that Democrats and Liberals can journal, that Democrats and Liberals a full vote, nor about the exact emigrant have been wont to quote with special sats of 5,000,000 isfaction, has the higher authority of generations of the state of Missouri in 1872." countryman could "plant" $500 on that proposition.

"Come and see me, boys," and out came the old red pocket book and five $100 bills were counted out in a twinkling.

The sum was covered by an equal amount and a responsible stake-holder found and the bet closed.

The Grant men seemed to gain backbone at this, and a half dozen small bets were immediately made that Missouri would go for Grant. There was a fascination in the countryman's figuring, and an assurance in his pluck, which was as reviving as a camp meeting, and every Republican who heard the bets made, went off 'Change reassured in Grant and the unchangeable radicalism of Missouri,—Missouri Democrat.

begs all the world to forget both. It goes out from itself in hope of finding a candi-date not tainted with its vileness, and bere we can but admira and wonder—it take: Horace Greeley, the good and great abo-litionist, protectionist, etc., whose whole life had been a vigorous protest against this very party. It takes him to its besom; it is a lively and a lovely corpse with the venerable Horace on its breast. If it does not have the decency to call for the serv-ices of the undertaker before November, the people will be obliged to undert ke for it. Horace, as a philosopher, a political economist, an anti-slavery champion, a venerable temperance man, a delightful old fellow, a farmer, is to be looked up to and venerated; as the companion of Fer-nando Wood, Boss Tweed, and John Morrisey, he is the funny loker.

The Democratic party, we submit, is not in a condition to turn national clown and to cut up such antics in its moribune state. We like fun, but do not think tha a party in a shroud, a party offensive to all nostrils, a ghostly, unburied body of death, is exactly the character to come on the stage to hug our old friend Greeley, just for the fun of the thing. Greeley may well cry now, as he has all his life:
"Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"—Missouri Democrat,

this death?"—Missouri Democrat,

"Candidates are but pointers on the dial plate of parties, and are moved and controlled by the forces which lie behind them," said Judge Brinkerhoff, at the Fifth avenue post marten. Even so, Greeley is but a pointer on the dial plate of the Democratic party, and is moved and controlled backward "by the forces which prodigiously lie behind him." The country prefers the clock and pointer that mark progress, and thinks of smashing the back-action concern, pointer and all. probability of Grant's carrying Missouri.
The company seemed pretty evenly divided in opinion.
"I'll bet a hundred dollars," said one carnest Greeley Democrat, "that Missouri goes for Greeley by as large a majority as Illinois does for Grant,"
"Make it $500," put in a Grant man, and I'll cover the bet."
"Done!"—money planked up instanted.
